NATIONAL CONSTITUTION CENTER TO HOST NAPOLÉON EXHIBITION

Philadelphia, PA (May 1, 2009) – The seller behind the greatest real estate deal in American history – the Louisiana Purchase – which doubled the size of the country at a cost of $15 million, or approximately four cents per acre, Napoléon Bonaparte (1769-1821) remains an undeniably powerful and enigmatic figure in world history. From May 29 through September 7, 2009, the National Constitution Center will host NAPOLÉON, an exhibition offering visitors a rare opportunity to explore the private life of the Emperor of France and to see beyond the legend to gain an understanding of this complex figure as a man and political leader whose actions reshaped the landscape of Europe and America.

Created from the extraordinary collection of First Empire authority and author, Pierre-Jean Chalençon, NAPOLÉON showcases rare, personal belongings of Napoléon I, as well as some of the most famous depictions of him by important artists of the time. The exhibition's tour marks the first time the Chalençon Collection has been seen in North America and the first time a number of items on display have ever been seen by the general public. NAPOLÉON is a 6,000 square foot traveling exhibition from the Russell Etling Company. The exhibition is produced and distributed by Exhibits Development Group in cooperation with Cultural Arts Entertainment Group.

“Napoléon is one of history’s most iconic political figures; this exhibition sheds light on his fascinating life,” said National Constitution Center President and Chief Executive Officer, Linda E. Johnson. “It also conveys how the destinies of France and America intersected from the time of the American Revolution to Napoleon’s reign.”

NAPOLÉON features more than 300 objects from the First Empire of Napoléon Bonaparte, including original framed paintings, sculptures, personal effects, prints, and documents, as well as furniture from the Imperial palaces. The exhibition is organized into twelve sections that trace Napoléon’s life: The Rise to Power, The Egyptian Campaign, First Consul, The Coronation, The Emperor’s Family, The Imperial Court, Art and the Emperor, Napoléon at War, The Road to Defeat, The Final Exile, Death of the Emperor, and Legend. Highlights include:

- The earliest known letter in Napoléon’s hand, written at age 14
- A lock of hair from Napoléon’s wife Empress Josephine Bonaparte
- The sword that proclaimed Napoléon Emperor in the Coronation Ceremony at Notre Dame
- One of Napoléon’s signature hats worn during the battle at Essling in 1809
- Napoléon’s camp bed from the Battle of Wagram
- Napoléon’s personal map of the French Empire at its zenith in 1812
- In his own hand, the first will Napoléon wrote during his final exile on the island of St. Helena
- Napoléon’s monogrammed shirt and long johns worn shortly before his death.

The exhibition also showcases connections between Napoléon and the United States. The correlations are highlighted in artifact displays, such as the valise that contained the signed Louisiana Purchase documents from America and a book on the American Revolution from Napoléon’s exile on the island of St. Helena. Additionally, text panels chronicle the influence of the American Revolution on the French Revolution, Napoléon’s admiration for George Washington, the impact of the Louisiana Purchase, the First Empire style used by President James Monroe to redecorate the White House, and Joseph Bonaparte’s (Napoleon’s brother) time in Philadelphia and Bordentown, New Jersey, among other connections.
